Editorial

Dear Friends,

Success cannot be pursued; success ensues. It flows as unintended by product of efforts concentrated in the direction of a worthy cause which is often quoted by leadership guru Robin Sharma. Our success in the institutions need to be result oriented but also should be impact and legacy oriented helping our students who will put hard work and working for the welfare of the nation as a top priority where they can reap autonomy and prosperity. The secret of generating extraordinary levels of passion our life is to discover our larger purpose. The larger purpose lies in the nature of dream we dream for life. Beyond duty not only supporting to elevate the family status but also elevating the greatness of the country and humanity are our responsibility.

When you were born, you cried while the world rejoiced is a Sanskrit saying. Parents and elders instruct us that “Live your life in such a way that you die the world cries while you rejoice”. We have technology to help us to stay connected, but we are less connected with humanity. We as mentors ought to help our staff and students to be well versed in technology, science and knowledge at the same time creating an opportunity and ambiance to connect the larger world to spread the values and principles in life. “Your value is the product of your thoughts. Do not miscalculate your self worth by multiplying your insecurities”. ~Dodinsky. Yes, our thoughts help us to realize the purpose of our life. Purpose is the most powerful motivator in the world and our purpose is to support the stake holders to realize the passion of life fulfillment.

Thomas Edison states that Genius is one percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration. Life fulfillment, creative challenge, growth, joy and sense of satisfaction which we crave in a day long journey should be our perspiration to inspire our staff and students. What makes difference in our life is to live meaningful life and helping others to question the ultimate benefit in life and the life making difference in others' life. Inspiring hearts are much more helpful to alleviate the suffering and adversaries of others so as to bring peace, harmony and freedom. Generating self confidence, motivating to realize the potentials, strengthening faith in oneself and others are our daily duty towards staff and students. “What lies with in us more important than what we perform”. Our performance is the by product of our thought. Of course our thought must create a new world where peace, bliss, contentment, self respect, self esteem, wisdom and freedom reign.

Let us balance our success with significance so as to unveil the timeless truths!

Let us keep our head high in creating impact and up keeping the legacy in the lives of others!!

Let us find our source and lead a meaningful life so as to radiate the radiance of love. !!!

Self Esteem.....

“Self-esteem is the disposition to experience oneself as competent to cope with the basic challenges of life and as worthy of happiness.” Nathaniel Branden

The Importance of Self-Esteem

Of all the judgments we pass in our lives, none is as important as the one we pass on ourselves. The greatest evil that can befall man is that he should come to think ill of himself.

High Self-Esteem: Mental Health, Quality of relationships, Success, Social effectiveness and Happiness.

Low Self-Esteem: Anxiety, Depression, Psychosomatic symptoms, Underachievement.

Criticism: Egotism (arrogance and conceit) “The person who feels weak becomes a bully, the inferior person a braggart; a flexing of muscles, much talk, cockiness, an endeavor to brazen it out, are symptoms of covert anxiety in a person or a group.” Rollo May

Salvaging Self-Esteem’s Self-Esteem

What self-esteem is not — a product of empty reinforcement, Pseudo self-esteem.

What self-esteem is —Founded in reality, Product of hard work.

A New Formulation: Dependent self-esteem, Independent self-esteem and Unconditional self-esteem.

Dependent Self-Esteem: Worthiness —Other-determined, Competence — Other-comparison

Independent Self-Esteem: Worthiness — Self-determined, Competence — Self-Comparison.

Unconditional Self-Esteem: Worthiness — Not contingent, Competence — Interdependent.

The Importance of Being Independent: Moral Behavior, True to principles, Empathy, Better cognitive performance, Creative thinking, Commitment to continuous learning, Increased Happiness, Calmness, courageous, authentic, loving and the joy of self-expression.

The Case of Relationships: “Differentiation is your ability to maintain your sense of self when you are emotionally and/or physically close to others—especially as they become increasingly important to you. Differentiation permits you to maintain your own course when lovers, friends, and family pressure you to agree and conform. Well-differentiated people can agree without feeling like they’re ‘losing themselves,’ and can disagree without feeling alienated and embittered.” David Schnarch (1997)

Cultivating Independent and Unconditional Self-Esteem: “It is easy in the world to live after the world’s opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.” Ralph Waldo Emerson

Change: Attitude, Behavior.

It's not who you are that holds you back, it's who you think you're not. ~Author Unknown

Enhancing Self-Esteem: Induce calm, Slave to passions, Finding flow, Coping, Humble behavior, Taking time and integrity.

Stage Model:

Stage 1: Automatic reaction, Conformity, Dependent self.

Stage 2: Deliberate reflAction, Self reliance, Independent core self

Integrity Treatment: Being known versus validated (Schnarch, 1997), Express not impress, Assert yourself, Gradually expanding integrity, From journaling to loved-one to world, From day to week to life-long, Truth sets us free.

Your Self Esteem and Happiness:

- Listen to your inner voice and follow it for it is wisdom and knows what is best for you.
- Talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet.
- Think only of the best, to work only for the best and expect only the best-you deserve nothing less.
- Care about the happiness and success of others and offer them all the help and encouragement they need.
- Forget your past mistakes and focus on your successes encouraging yourself to greater achieve-
